Meet the Bluenoses. A fun-packed animated series for creative young viewers who want to learn to draw, doodle and rhyme. Built around the double act of Cookie (he draws the words) and Big Ed (who writes the pictures), Bluenoses opens up a universe of inspiration and stimulation via fun poems, drawings, animation and music. Produced by a team with world class educational experience and engagement, and with a belief in the educational power of combining word and image, each episode features a brilliant new poem by Paul Cookson, one of Britain's best-loved children's poets, along with an animated drawing from globally renowned illustrator, Martin Chatterton. Bluenoses came about during the pandemic after Martin and Paul, both internationally in- demand school art and literacy performers with an unparalleled experience in hands-on, faceto-face engagement with young audiences, began examining ways to bring their popular live presentations to the screen. Producer Annie Chatterton (keeping things in the family) shaped the series approach and style and what emerged was Bluenoses:

approach and some and the first of engaging poetry and punchy, pacy bursts of engaging poetry and joyous animated drawings.

Joyous among the first of the series, ensuring that not only and professional knowledge.
